James Levine & Associates, P.C. provides an integrated array of services. They function as a team, and offer consultation based on their in-depth knowledge of schools and the developmental needs of children. At the same time, therapy services may occur in school or at our offices. While we ensure confidentiality, our goal is to coordinate interventions so that schools and families work together to ensure the educational, social, and psychological well-being of children. We provide extensive professional development training for school personnel along with mental health and family support agencies.

The Early Childhood Autism Clinic is now offering multi-disciplinary play-based comprehensive evaluations for children who may be at risk for autism spectrum disorders.

PL766-approved school and a Mass. Public Health licensed free-standing clinic. Its mission is to help children with autism and related developmental disorders achieve a meaningful life. The Center's clinic serves children under 3 years of age while the school accepts children from 3 to 14 years of age. The cognitive-development systems approach -- known as the Miller Method -- builds on the capabilities of the children. The approach does not use "time-out" or employ reward and punishment as a means of helping the children. It does use elevated structures to help the children focus their attention and to become more aware of their own bodies and their immediate surroundings. Its efforts are directed toward helping the children become more organized and to help them expand their realities in a way which includes interaction with both people and objects.

These services grew out of the need to provide support and technical assistance to general and special education educators, state and private agency staff, community and family members and individuals with disabilities regarding "Current Best Practices." These research-based guidelines are utilized to encourage effective education for all students thereby ensuring that each student is able to achieve his or her potential.

Expected outcomes of these services are that each student regardless of severity of disability will be as independent as possible while being a productive community member. The definition here extends to include adults.
